

Nancy Rose Cahill is a digital artist who uses Adobe Illustrator, creating vectors, or shapes, with thousands of mouse clicks. She is able to manipulate the resulting shapes by adding color, texture, depth, and unlimited detail. The “wireframe” picture below gives an idea of how the shapes are created.

Nancy also works in pencil; some of her favorite subjects are the natural details in ancient tree trunks, the gingerbread decorations of Victorian architecture, and interesting human faces.

Nancy lives in Woodbridge with two dogs and a small pride of cats, none of whom will deign to sit still for portraits.

Nancy shows her work exclusively at the Artists’ Undertaking gallery.
